

Peak Physical Therapy announces new director of education, employee mentorship

Peak Physical Therapy & Sports Performance announced that Rachel Laufer has been named director of education and employee mentorship.

Laufer is also the practice's center coordinator of clinical education. In her expanded role as director of education and employee mentorship, she monitors and coordinates all educational opportunities for Peak's therapy staff to assist them in advancing their skills and thereby continually enhance the exceptional care that is the hallmark of Peak Physical Therapy & Sports Performance. She also works with the practice's therapy staff to help identify broad-ranging areas of need.

A resident of Weymouth, Laufer joined Peak Physical Therapy & Sports Performance in 2015. She earned her Doctorate of Physical Therapy from State University of New York Upstate Medical University in Syracuse in 2014. She also completed an Orthopedic Residency from Sacred Heart University in 2015. Laufer holds the designation of orthopedic certified specialist, a significant achievement that distinguishes her among her peers as a specialist in evaluating and treating orthopedic conditions.

"It's a pleasure to announce Rachel as our director of education and employee mentorship," said Eric Edelman, owner of Peak Physical Therapy & Sports Performance. "It's a post that requires great skill, knowledge and responsibility. Rachel is the perfect individual to fill this vital role within our organization."
