

Peak Physical Therapy forms alliance with TRG Performance Training

Peak Physical Therapy & Sports Performance announced a business alliance with TRG Performance Training in Hanover.

Eric Edelman, owner of Peak Physical Therapy & Sports Performance, and Tim Gleason, owner of TRG Performance Training, have established a business relationship with the shared goal to help athletes further excel.

As such, new TRG clients will receive a 30-minute injury prevention evaluation by Peak Physical Therapy to screen for potential issues that may hinder their training. In addition, should TRG client athletes encounter a potential issue during their training Peak Physical Therapy will perform free injury screenings to determine the issue and initiate therapy, if necessary. Conversely, Peak clients who need sports performance training post-rehabilitation will be referred to TRG.

“This relationship should be a great benefit to our mutual clients and further enhance their athletic performance,” said Edelman.

